

From the Board of Directors

As some people like to point out at this time of year, the month of January is named for the ancient Roman deity Janus, the god of beginnings and endings (plus doorways, gates, passageways, and whatever else gets you from one side of a wall to the other). Janus famously has two faces, one looking forward and the other looking backward.

So, in this, my final letter from the President, I'd like to first look backward and thank you all for your support and activity as BELS members during the 2 years of my presidency.

Now, looking forward, I am pleased to introduce our new BELS president, Erica Goodoff, ELS(D). Erica has been a BELS member and certified ELS since 2010, and she earned Diplomate (now Distinguished Editor) status in 2020.

Erica works as a Senior Scientific Editor in the Research Medical Library at The University of Texas MD Anderson Cancer Center, where she edits medical research manuscripts and grant proposals, mentors junior editors, and teaches workshops on biomedical writing. She has also served as managing editor of 4 scientific research journals.

In addition, Erica was president of the Southwest Chapter of the American Medical Writers Association in 2023-2024, and she served the chapter in several other capacities before that. She began her term as president-elect of BELS at the start of 2025.

I have known Erica as a friend and colleague for many years, and I know that, with her at the helm, the future of BELS will be bright.

Immediate Past President

Return of the Newsletter!

For those of you who have been BELS members for a while, you may have noticed that The BELS Letter took quite the sabbatical—this is our first issue since November 2024! You also may notice that we are back with a new email format rather than a PDF format. Our newsletter is still evolving, so you may see additional changes to its look and feel over the coming months. One thing that will not change is the newsletter's availability on the BELS website as a PDF.

The goal for The BELS Letter going forward is to provide you with the key information you need each month: updates from the Board of Directors, upcoming events, engagement opportunities, a list of newly certified editors, and timely features. We welcome your feedback and ideas for features going forward. You'll find the Board's contact information at the bottom of each newsletter if you'd like to reach out. We look forward to hearing from you!

Congratulations to Our Newly Certified BELS Editors!

In 2025, fifty-five editors passed the BELS exam to earn their Editor in the Life Sciences (ELS) certification. One editor received their ELS Distinguished (ELS[D]) certification. Congratulations to this esteemed group of editors!

The Board of Editors in the Life Sciences (BELS) was founded in 1991 to evaluate the proficiency of manuscript editors in the life sciences and to award credentials similar to those obtainable in other professions.

Potential employers and clients of manuscript editors usually have no objective way to assess the proficiency of editors. For their part, editors are frustrated by the difficulty of demonstrating their ability. That is why both employers and editors so often resort to personal references or ad hoc tests, not always with satisfactory results.

The need for an objective test of editorial skill has long been recognized.

To meet that need, BELS developed a process for testing and evaluating proficiency in editing in the life sciences. The Board administers two examinations—one for certification and one for Distinguished status. The examinations, written by senior life-science editors assisted by testing experts, focus on the principles and practices of scientific editing in English.
